

Hong Kong Noodle Wireflow
HMW: Improve menu navigation
Liv Riggins

To improve navigation to and within the menu, I condensed the main nav headings into three categories. I reorganized the submenu for the actual menu and created a grid layout. On click, menu items display a longer description and picture.

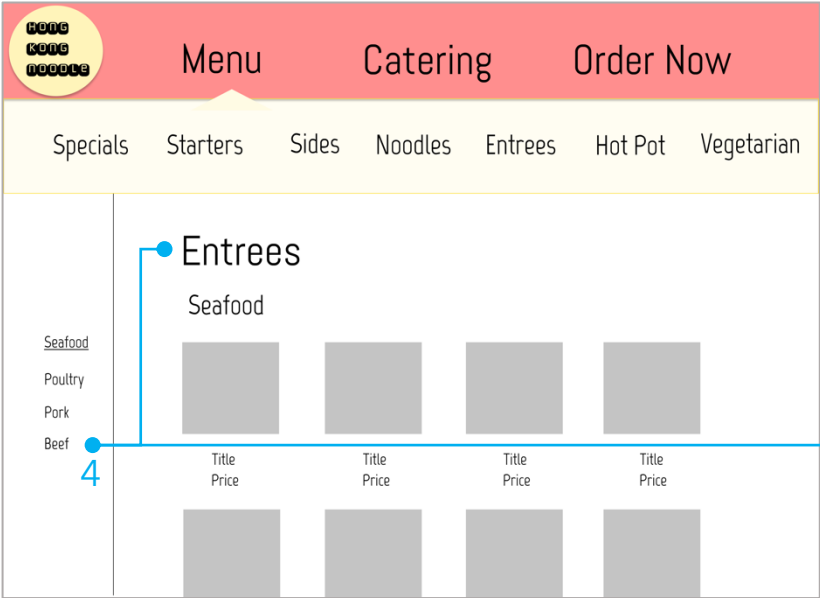

This layout fits both experienced users—who may only want to check the name and price of their favorite dish—and new users, who may want to see all of the information about a dish.

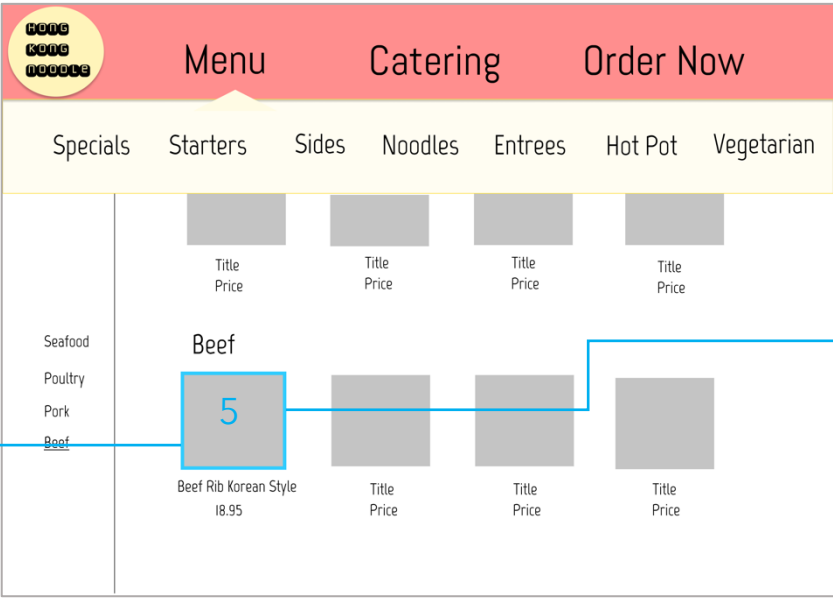

1. User selects menu.

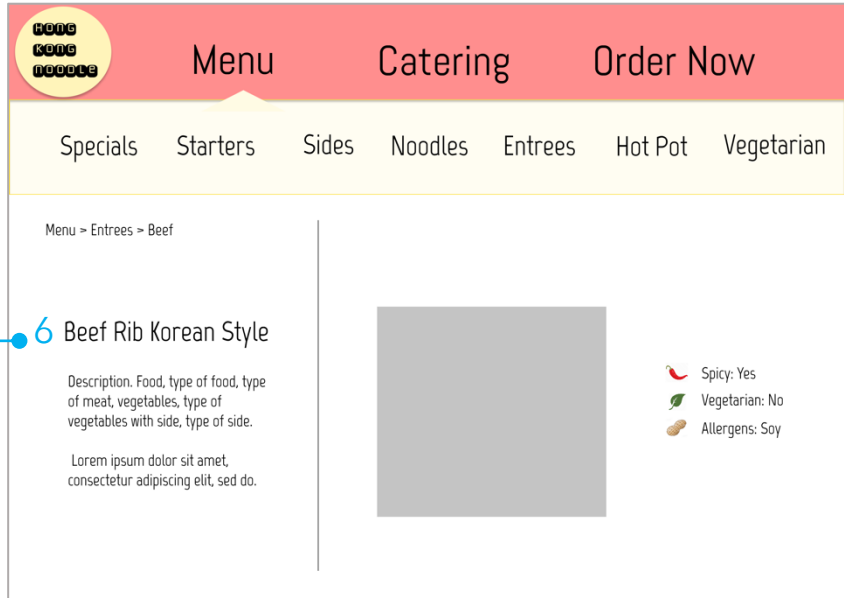

2. User arrives at menu page and sees options.
3. User selects Entrees.

4. User selects Beef from sidebar.

5. User sees price, images, and dish names, and clicks on Beef Rib Korean Style.

6. User finds dish description, picture, ingredient information, and key characteristics.